- increasing and decreasing licenced spaces
- licence renewals
- rights and privileges of residents
- placement of clients
- approved home enhancements / layered needs
- resident discharge from home
- conflict of interest
- medications
- amendment, cancellation or suspension of licence

Until such time as new policies and procedures, approved by the Regional Director(s) of Mental Health Services, are developed and the SHA provides notice of the same to the Ministry of Health, the policies and procedures contained in the appendices of the October 2015 Mental Health Approved Home Operator's Manual shall remain in use.

3. Introduction

What is a Mental Health Approved Home?

A Mental Health Approved Home is a primary residence that is issued a license under The Mental Health Services Act. The Mental Health Approved Home must operate according to the requirements in The Mental Health Services Act and Regulations and the Mental Health Approved Home Program Operator Manual. Approved Homes provide residential services to persons with mental health issues. Each approved home has a condition on their licence that requires them to operate in accordance with the most recent edition of the Mental Health Approved Homes Program Operator Manual.

Goal of the Mental Health Approved Home Program

The goal of the Mental Health Approved Home Program is to provide a safe living experience supportive of a person's recovery. These family living experiences may be for short to long-term periods with the common aim being to support and promote successful community integration. The operators and the home must facilitate this goal through providing a positive, nurturing atmosphere where residents feel:

- safe from physical and psychological harm;
- accepted by others;
- free to express oneself; and,
- understood.

Note: When the term "Approved Home" or "Home" is used in this document, it means a mental health approved home.

Becoming an approved home operator is the beginning of an intense learning experience. Much of this learning will be on the job training. Prior to licensing, operators will receive an orientation and are required to take courses in Standard First Aid, Food Safety, and CPR and generally become familiar mental health issues. Ongoing training will also be available. Operators are expected to participate in at least one full day of training on an annual basis. Most operators who are seriously interested in people and in helping others will be successful in providing a family like living environment and experience for their residents.

Contact your local mental health clinic to obtain information about mental health and mental illness. The Schizophrenia Society of Saskatchewan and the Canadian Mental Health Association are also good resources.

Life experiences can be an asset. A person who has lived in a family with a person who has a disability has likely gained great insight that can be useful in operating an approved home. Many residents have faced problems in their own life and may have been rejected and/or misunderstood because of them. An approved home operator needs a sense of humour, must be understanding, patient, quick thinking and respectful.

Who are the Residents?

The residents of the Mental Health Approved Home Program are adult persons who face serious challenges as a result of mental illnesses such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, depression and other psychiatric disorders. They may also have cognitive issues, an addiction or a legal problem. These challenges may make independent living difficult for a time.

Medications (injections and/or pills) are often helpful in managing the symptoms of these illnesses. For these medications to work best, good nutrition and regular meals are necessary. Approved Homes provide an effective stage between hospital care and supported independent living or a self-reliant life.

The Approved Home must provide a low stress living environment with daily monitoring of mental health issues.

The largest group of persons in Approved Homes have severe mental illness or a disorder that has remained active for at least one year and often several years. The illness or disorder can cause moderate to severe functional disabilities such as:

- low stress tolerance;
- lack of concentration;
- confusion;
- overwhelming emotions;
- poor judgement; and
- learning problems.

Persons with a mental disorder or illness frequently have difficulty in finding and maintaining their own accommodations during and following periods of severe symptoms. Many require shelter and support because of difficulties including:

- managing money;
- inexperience in independent living situations;
- organizational skills;
- self-care capacities; and
- arranging and maintaining support from other persons.

The Mental Health Approved Home Operator has the opportunity to partner with residents to:

- be part of a “circle of support” of the person’s choosing to facilitate recovery
- help inform a resident’s recovery plans and improve the planning, organization and delivery of mental health services and supports.

4. The Mental Health Services Act and Regulations

It is important to understand that the manual provides assistance with The Mental Health Services Act and Regulations and it is not a replacement.

Mental Health Approved Home Operators and persons responsible for administration of the particular portions of the legislation that pertain to mental health approved homes should be familiar with The Mental Health Services Act and Regulations. It is advisable that the documents be reviewed yearly upon licence review or as part of education supplied by the Saskatchewan Health Authority.

5. Ministry of Social Services funding for residents on a temporary absence or discharge

Please see the Ministry of Social Services, Saskatchewan Assistance Program, Policy Manual for information on payment for temporary absences of residents, required notice periods, etc.

6. Request for Review by the Ministry of Health

- A person who is the subject of a decision or action made with respect to the issuing, refusal to issue, renewal, amendment, suspension or cancellation of a license for mental health approved home by the PHA, after exhausting appeal to the Regional Director may request a Ministry of Health review of the decision.

The request for a review of the decision should be made to the Director of Mental Health Services, Ministry of Health.

- The request for the review must be in writing and be within 30 calendar days of the Regional Director's decision.
- A request for review to the Ministry does not stay the effect of the decision or action in relation to which the review is requested.
- On receiving the request the Ministry shall:
 - review the information provided regarding the decision;
 - allow the person requesting the review the opportunity to make representation in person or in written form; and
 - request further information if necessary.
- On completing the review, the Director shall:
 - confirm, reverse or vary the decision or action in relation to which the review was requested; and
 - provide written reasons for the decision to the person who requested the review.
